This pack seeks urgent ministerial and secretarial intervention in the above matters.

This pack seeks urgent ministerial and secretarial intervention in the above matters, together with formal United States government oversight of the full resolution process and restoration of travel access.

The crimes outlined would not have been possible without powers provided to wrongdoers by government departments in Australia. There has been a total systemic failure to correct the criminal wrongdoing and economic sabotage. The United States government has already played a decisive role in helping put a stop to the ongoing harm and is therefore uniquely positioned to provide independent, high-level oversight of the recovery process.

The issue originally stems from an inheritance theft in 2008, and the misuse of departments, combined with a lack of restorative justice by higher departments, has led to a series of unending catastrophic losses for the heir at every level below Parliament.

This pack forges forward in the spirit of a recent success where a drug dealer had been permitted to take the victim's unit hostage for an extended period. The housing provider was apathetic and dismissive of doing the right thing because of false media materials that led them to believe criminal acts against the targets were acceptable, until a ministerial review resulted in the three-year ordeal being reconciled within a month.

It is likely that the same urgency and success can be applied to the root causes, not just the effects.

Just as with the drug dealer not being stopped from taking the unit hostage until ministerial intervention, every other avenue has been exhausted in attempting to correct the above wrongdoing and departmental failures in reversing the cascading collateral damage caused by the inheritance theft and the media used to conceal it, including actions involving government departments themselves (Titles Queensland, NSW Justice Department, etc.).

After further researching ministerial powers, I think this might now be in the right place.

Essentially, a somewhat localised white-collar crime ended up having an international footprint because the perpetrators were using false media materials to assist with stealing the inheritance of a musician who was in the midst of performing and developing a following around the world.

They lied about me, stole from me, I think they killed my mother, then committed fraud on her estate and attempted to have me killed by proxy. I want them all held accountable and, in doing so, protect the sanctity of the United States of America, the Commonwealth of Australia, the State of Queensland, and my mother's honour.

Thank you for your help
